Roughly Used Up.

Sam Betts, the cowboy preacher, who went from Fayette over into Raleigh to preach Democracy, met with rough treatment Saturday while making one of his wild speeches on the court house steps at Beckley. He pointed out Sheriff Campbell as a drunkard and became so abusive that Mr. Campbell took him by the collar and pitched him off the steps. He fell so heavily that his collar bone was broken and he had to be taken to the hospital—Journal.

Some Very Old Whiskey.

While digging after a sassafras root on the bank of Elk near the Webster Springs Hotel one day last week, A. G. Cogar uncovered a pint bottle of "homemade" corn whiskey, which he believes to have been hidden in the roots of the tree by Quince Harris twenty-nine years ago. Harris made a great deal of this kind of whiskey here about that time, and as some of our citizens have not yet forgotten the palatable taste peculiar to the Harris whiskey, they recognized it at once. The cork in the bottle was decayed down to the last quarter of an inch, but this much was still firm and protected the contents from becoming diluted with water and filled with dirt. Being in glass, the liquor had improved little if any by age, but Mr. Cogar says a spoonful of it has as much strength as a half pint of the booze commonly dispensed nowadays. There is probably not another drop of the famous Quince Harris whiskey in existence, he having been dead for many years.—Webster Echo.
